President's Message

Editor's Note: The President's Message in this issue of Montpelier is an excerpt from President Carrier's remarks to the graduating class at the Summer Commencement program on July 28, 1995.

OCT 20 1995

I'm not going to give you a list of things that will make you successful, wise and happy in your future lives. I'm not going to give you a number of rules to follow in the future. It won't be a list or a series of things. I just have one simple statement of advice for you – keep your eye on the ball.

Some of you may know that I'm a great baseball fan – my favorite teams are the JMU Dukes and the St. Louis Cardinals. I only wish the Cardinals were having as good a year as the Dukes had.

If you know baseball, you know there's a very fundamental rule for hitting – keep your eye on the ball. It's a simple rule and you can apply the same rule to golf, soccer, lacrosse and most other sports. In baseball, if you don't keep your eye on the ball, you're going to strike out a lot – like the Cardinals are doing this year. But if you keep your eye on the ball, you'll win most of your games – like the Dukes did.

But "keeping your eye on the ball" means more than just a way to perform better on an athletic field. "Keeping your eye on the ball" also means to concentrate, to keep your focus, to avoid temptations and distractions from unimportant and superfluous things.

There are a multitude of things that can take your attention away from the things that should be receiving your concentration – in your personal life and in your professional life.

On the simplest level, keeping your eye on the ball can just mean not to be distracted by a TV show when you should be sharing time with your spouse or your children. On the personal level, it means not to let petty annoyances or disagreements escalate into a major problem with your family members or your neighbors. Keep your focus on the important things with your family – the love and affection between you and your spouse, your children, your parents. Don't take your eye off the ball and let minor things detract from the importance of personal relationships with friends and family.

In the business world, you can't succeed if you take your eye off the ball.

I used this baseball analogy at a number of planning sessions this summer with administrative and faculty leaders at JMU.

I told them that they must continue to focus on the important things at JMU, the reasons our university is here, the reasons we have become a great institution. We must concentrate on the goal of providing the finest education possible for our students, on continually adding greater value to the education we offer, on continually becoming a more efficient institution, an institution that challenges students and supports them. I told them – as I tell you – don't let the constant daily brush fires that pop up distract you from what is important.

There are always going to be short-lived passing problems that seem serious at the time – the "crisis de jour," we sometimes call them. You must deal with problems like that but don't let them consume you and don't let them distract from your main objectives and goals. There will always be circumstances where occasions arise or are created that could take your attention away from what is important. Don't let it happen. Keep your focus. Keep your eye on the ball.

With your efforts and thoughts concentrating on important things and not being distracted by annoyances and petty squabbles you will succeed – both professionally and as human beings.

My best wishes to each of you.

Ronald E. Carrier

Ronald E. Carrier
President

President Ronald E. Carrier has often expressed in eloquent terms his goal for James Madison University – to be the finest undergraduate institution in the United States. The James Madison University Foundation has pledged its support to this lofty ideal.

The JMU Foundation has been charged by the university to manage private contributions to promote the welfare, efficiency and general objectives of the university. The board of directors is legally responsible for the stewardship of gifts to the university and manages and utilizes each gift according to the intent of its donor.

James Madison University has outstanding faculty and students. Alumni are active and supportive of its programs. Parents proudly proclaim their status as parents of JMU students. The legislature of Virginia has aided the university in its growth.

The JMU Foundation is the instrument through which you, the donor – whether alumni, parent or friend – make a difference in the achievements and accomplishments of James Madison University. In fact, Dr. Carrier's goals for JMU cannot be reached without your continued and increasing support. All of JMU's supporters must increase their gifts to the university. Those who have not given, for one reason or another, must ask themselves what JMU means to them and then act accordingly. Those who have appreciated assets that they no longer rely upon for their livelihood should contact Don R. Moore II, assistant vice president for development, to learn the many ways these assets can help JMU.

James Madison University now has an endowment of more than $8.6 million. Your support helps that endowment grow and increases the potential for excellence in JMU's programs and students.

The JMU Foundation's commitment to the university translated last year into $532,000 of scholarship assistance to worthy and needy students. In addition, the foundation provided $300,000 to support athletics and $2 million in support of non-athletic university programs.

The foundation understands that JMU cannot be the best undergraduate institution in the United States merely by having the best biology department or the best English department or the best music department. All of the university's departments must strive to be the best and have the resources to assist them. With the vision and leadership of Dr. Carrier, an outstanding faculty that is constantly improving, the greatest students anywhere, and your support, the goal can be achieved.

Be proud of JMU and proclaim that pride to one and all. Support the ideals and future of James Madison University, to which the JMU Foundation has pledged its commitment. Give the university your support. Be part of the margin of excellence that characterizes James Madison University, the nation's finest undergraduate institution.

CHIEF FINANCIAL OFFICER'S REPORT

The James Madison University Foundation received $3,518,098 in financial support during fiscal year 1994-95 from contributions, investments and other revenue such as program fees, sponsorships, royalties and special fund-raising projects.

As you can see from the financial statements presented here, your contributions and support helped translate into $2.5 million in expenditures to augment the budget of James Madison University in order to enhance learning opportunities for JMU students and support the university's overall growth, strength and progress. The remaining $967,828 is held in net assets for use in future years.

The "Balance Sheet" reports the James Madison University Foundation's financial position, and the "Statement of Activities" reports the results of its activities during the past fiscal year (1994-95). "Resource Utilization" on Page 4 shows more specifically how restricted and unrestricted resources were utilized by the university community.

The foundation's financial statements, from which this report derives, have been audited in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards. The foundation complies with all reporting requirements of governmental agencies regulating not-for-profit organizations.

The JMU Foundation classifies financial support according to donor-imposed restrictions and according to the respective program when fees are earned. Several hundred restricted accounts are maintained by the foundation.

"Temporarily Restricted" represents net assets and resources that are limited by restrictions. "Permanently Restricted" represents net assets and resources that must be maintained permanently. The income derived from these permanently restricted net assets must be expended according to the stated restriction.

"Unrestricted" net assets and resources are not limited by donor-imposed restrictions but can be expended where the university's need is greatest. The Foundation's Board of Directors annually designates the use of unrestricted net assets and resources in promoting the objectives of JMU.

Net assets during the fiscal year increased by $1,582,929. Most of the increase was due to contributions and investment revenue that added $777,783 to endowments (permanently restricted net assets). Another large component of the increase was the $615,101 due to a change in accounting principles for gift pledges: Not-for-Profit organizations' financial statements now must report multi-year pledges; previously, organizations recorded gifts at the time they actually were received.

Temporarily restricted net assets increased by $332,403, while unrestricted net assets decreased by $99,871 in order to provide the resources for university program expenses during the year.

Expenses for Educational and General Programs (E&G) totaled $1,448,783 and include the following categories: Instruction - $220,660; Research - $8,089; Public Service - $181,552; Academic Support - $139,887; Student Support - $23,565; Institutional Support - $245,837; Operation & Maintenance of Plant - $53,338; Scholarships & Fellowships - $575,855.

Highlighted here are a few substantial expenses within the E&G programs: Scholarships and related grants totaled $556,462. Fellowships totaled $19,393. Direct transfers to JMU departmental expenditure budgets totaled $241,162. Supplies and material expenses totaled $40,026. Travel expenses totaled $68,129.

HIGHLIGHTS of EDUCATION and GENERAL EXPENDITURES

Small equipment and book purchases totaled $39,865. Depreciable assets transferred to JMU totaled $35,364.

Overall expenses, which include E&G programs, Alumni Chapters, Intercollegiate Athletics, Foundation Operations and Fund Raising, amounted to $2,550,270 for the year.

Temporarily Restricted resources provided $1,665,492 toward expenses that satisfy donor-imposed restrictions. Unrestricted resources provided $799,135 toward expenses that were designated by the JMU Foundation Board of Directors. Unrestricted revenue received during the year was less than the $799,135 expended, requiring $99,871 from beginning net assets to meet planned program expenses.

The James Madison University Foundation thanks the alumni, faculty, staff, businesses, organizations, parents and friends whose private support continues to be an essential factor in the success and high quality of James Madison University's endeavors.

University Advancement

FUND-RAISING REPORT

P rivate charitable contributions to James Madison University reached $2.1 million during fiscal year 1994-95.

Those dollars were contributed by 15,758 alumni, parents, friends, faculty and staff, businesses, corporations, foundations and organizations.

Of the $2.1 million total, $712,568 came from 10,684 alumni, and $259,131 was contributed by 2,934 parents. The number of faculty and staff donors increased from last year's 211 to this year's 272 donors. They contributed a total of $66,578, while support from private foundations, businesses and corporations provided $566,708.

Gifts from friends of JMU showed a dramatic increase, rising from $343,376 from 718 donors in 1993-94 to $406,169 from 1,528 donors in 1994-95.

The impact of your giving is far stronger and more profound than each individual gift. When you give, you create a legacy of excellence and opportunity. Your gifts help start new programs, initiate special projects, award scholarships and enhance student research. You have created a legacy of giving, your own and JMU's. Whether you have been giving for years or have given for the first time this year, you have a tradition well worth continuing. Imagine the opportunities your gifts inspire:

- the professional and academic connections JMU students made last spring when you helped send them to the National Conference for Undergraduate Research to present their work.
- the new home for the Life Science Museum and the diverse living laboratory it provides for JMU's entomology, biology and zoology students.
- Jennifer Grace Wilson's surprise when JMU presented her with the TOWN Foundation's Sarah Lanier Tabb Oliver Memorial Scholarship in front of all her high school classmates last spring.

- the new resolve of your classmates, fellow parents and colleagues to give to JMU – because you did.

• the research and projects two faculty members will undertake annually as recipients of the new Distinguished Faculty and Distinguished Service awards, which have been endowed by past and present members of the Alumni Board of Directors.

• the pride of JMU as the university continues to attract high quality students through its endowed scholarship program. Twenty-two donors have made commitments either to increase their previous endowed gifts or create new endowments. Commitments from our leadership donors further strengthen JMU's scholarship program.

• today's students to one day help others through their gifts. The class of 1995 has already pooled its resources through the Senior Challenge to landscape the JMU Arboretum's future amphitheater.

That's what we call a legacy of giving – passing down opportunity through generations of JMU students. Thank you for your gift.

LEADERSHIP GIFTS

THE STANDARD OF GIVING

Leadership gifts to JMU totaled $541,103 during the 1994-95 year and represented 25.6 percent of the university's total private gift support.

At JMU, leadership gifts start at $5,000. The minimum contribution for endowing a scholarship is $10,000.

"Leadership giving is called that because it leads the way to prosperity for the university," says Don R. Moore II, assistant vice president for development. "With a leadership gift, the university can establish an academic program or endow a scholarship or infuse an established program with new vigor.

"Through their gifts," Moore adds, "these leaders also inspire others to give to JMU and to increase the amount of their gifts to JMU. They set the standard for giving."

The Class of 1935 celebrated its reunion by creating an endowed scholarship.

JMU SURPRISES SCHOLARSHIP RECIPIENT

JMU surprised Jennifer Grace Wilson of Salem, Mo., at her high school awards assembly with the presentation of the prestigious Sarah Lanier Tabb Oliver Memorial Scholarship.

Tom Nardi, JMU's director of scholarship support, and former Parents Council co-chair Betsy Phillips traveled to Salem, Mo., and announced the award in front of Jennifer's classmates, family and friends at Iron County C-4 High School in Viburnum.

The four-year scholarship, totaling $26,000, is presented annually to an outstanding high school senior who plans to attend JMU. It is the largest privately supported scholarship at JMU and was established as part of the endowment of the TOWN Foundation, a philanthropic organization based in Norfolk, Va.

Wilson ranked third in her senior class with an overall 3.7 grade point average on a 4.0 scale. She received top honors in volleyball and in basketball and is a skilled musician and vocalist.

ACADEMIC GIVING

GIFTS EXCEED $1.3 MILLION

Private giving to support and enhance James Madison University's academic program totaled $1,333,104 during 1994-95.

"Private contributions make the difference to JMU's academic programs," says Dr. Bethany Oberst, vice president for academic affairs. "They enable JMU to enhance the academic curriculum, to attract and retain top notch faculty, to draw high quality students and to continually raise JMU's standards of academic excellence."

The largest portion of academic giving, $521,061, was contributed by 9,269 individual alumni. Friends of the university gave $247,186, and 1,943 parents gave $173,803. Foundations provided $134,735 in support.

JMU faculty and staff contributed $36,473; 73 businesses gave $90,195; 66 organizations provided $58,885; and matching gift companies supported academics with $70,764.

Of the more than $1.3 million in giving for academics, $672,295 was designated by donors for specific academic programs and departments; $426,875 was unrestricted and was used for similar academic priorities such as programs, computer enhancements and scholarships; and $233,933 supported academic scholarships.

RESEARCH PINNACLE

For the seventh year in a row, JMU sent a contingent to the National Conference on Undergraduate Research (NCUR), held this year at Union College in Schenectady, N.Y. Funds from the JMU Foundation, JMU and the National Science Foundation helped pay the way for 13 JMU students from eight academic departments to present papers or make poster presentations at the conference.

For some JMU undergraduates, the conference was the culmination of years of research and team work with other student researchers and their faculty mentors.

NCUR gives students the opportunity to present their findings before a critical audience of their peers and experts in the field and the possibility to have their findings published.

DONORS PASS 5,000 MARK

The JMU Dukes' success on the playing field last year was matched by the Duke Club's success off the field. The Duke Club raised $775,567 during 1994-95 to assist the athletic program. That represents an increase of 7 percent over the previous fund-raising year. Duke Club membership increased by 23 percent, passing the 5,000 mark to a total of 5,147 donors.

The Step Ahead for the Dukes walkathon generated more than $40,000 of this year's total and was the major factor in the donor increase this year. The walkathon supported individual programs in the athletic department.

The Day for the Dukes campaign was an integral part of this year's fund-raising success. The volunteers secured $414,544 in gifts and pledges during the campaign.

"The Duke Club's goal continues to be to reach the $1 million annual giving level," says Duke Club director Mike Minnis. "Each year we get closer because of the tremendous commitment of our volunteers and the generous support of alumni, parents, businesses and friends."

SUPPORT FOR THE FUTURE

'NINA 46'

"I wanted to teach since I was in the fourth grade," says Nina Goodrich Goodridge. Her JMU license tag, "NINA 46," marks the year her wish came true, when she graduated with a degree in elementary education and set off on a career in teaching that began at Harrisonburg's old Main Street School and took her all over Virginia.

Goodridge has followed some of her students' careers and achievements, and some of them have kept in touch.

"I got the nicest letter from a lawyer in Washington I had taught," she says. "I enjoyed reading of a former student who went to Japan as a missionary. I look back and see some of the students I have helped."

Now retired, Goodridge continues to encourage others to achieve by naming JMU in her will.

"I had four wonderful years at Madison," she says. "When I graduated, not everyone went to college. It was my parents' legacy to me. We decided because of the education I received at Madison to make a gift so someone else can be helped."

During the period covered by this report, July 1, 1994 to June 30, 1995, the following planned gifts matured at a gift value of $137,133, providing support for various projects and programs at James Madison University. Founders' Society gifts may mature due to the death of a donor, the end of a specified term of years or a lifetime transfer.

NEW QUARTERS

LIFE SCIENCE MUSEUM DRAWS ALL KINDS OF CRITTERS

JMU's Life Science Museum, which showcases living and still-life animals, insects and other specimens of nature, moved to roomier quarters in Warren House last spring. The move upped the aspirations curator and biology professor Dr. James Grimm has for its future.

The Grace Street museum, which operates chiefly on private contributions, said goodbye to cramped quarters in Burruss Hall. In Warren House the museum continues to serve as a learning facility for JMU's zoology, biology and entomology students and draws field trips from area schools, senior citizens and others.

"Our objective is to be a regional natural history museum," Grimm says. With 6,000 visitors last year while the museum was still in Burruss Hall, it already qualifies as such.

"This is not a storage area," Grimm says. "This is a dynamic teaching area."

Just ask Stonewall the personable boa constrictor, who has a reputation as an escape artist. An aquarium room features live fish native to Virginia and saltwater invertebrates. Seashells, sand and rocks star in another room, while stuffed owls, pheasants, hawks, wood ducks and shore birds inhabit yet another room.

Still another collection would have made Teddy Roosevelt proud. The exhibition features stuffed deer, a mountain lion, boars, elk, a caribou, a beaver, a skunk, raccoons, a fox and a beaver.

"Until now, I feel like I've just maintained the museum," Grimm says. "Now I feel like I can turn ideas into reality and offer more things of interest to the campus and community."

Grimm's plans include a living tropical rain forest with live plants and insects indoors and a butterfly garden with flowering shrubs, a picnic area and gazebo outdoors. For now, until he can fashion a path from one to the other, the insect zoo lives behind Plexiglas.

Grimm is still scratching his head about one of the most infamous collections from the museum's Burruss Hall days. Just how will he fit the school children's favorite underground dinosaur exhibition into Warren House? He's working on it.

SENIOR CHALLENGE

LARGEST GIFT EVER

Ann Salamy and Joe Russo of the Class of 1995 presents the Senior Challenge pledge during commencement exercises.

The class of 1995 has pledged a gift of $48,239 to benefit the JMU Arboretum. It is the largest class pledge in the seven-year history of the Senior Challenge program.

The class of 1995 gift, which will be paid in installments over the next three years, will fund the the Class of 1995 Scholarship and the landscaping and gardens of a future amphitheater in the JMU Arboretum. The terraced earth and grass amphitheater will accommodate the arboretum's increasing number of musical and theatrical performances. The class gift will provide the trees, shrubbery and herbaceous plants and the landscaping of the amphitheater gardens.

The Senior Challenge is a fund-raising program organized and carried out exclusively by members of the senior class. In 1989, the first year of the program, the class of 1989 pledged $28,000 to the Carrier Library Resource Fund. The class of 1990 pledged $34,000 for the Office of Career Services; the class of 1991 pledged $43,000 for the library's reference and video collections; the class of 1992 pledged $41,000 for the library's endowment fund; the class of 1993 pledged $42,130 for the Emergency Loan Fund; and the class of 1994 pledged $42,522 for the Scholarship of Merit and the International Studies Scholarship.

10TH ANNIVERSARY ARBORETUM DEDICATES WILDFLOWER GARDEN

Norlyn Bodkin, George Wood and Col. Harold Snyder at the garden's dedication

The JMU Arboretum dedicated one of the largest wildflower gardens located south of Philadelphia last year.

The William Andrew Wood Memorial Garden honors a 1980 graduate and biology major who died in a rafting accident on the New River in West Virginia. The garden was funded by Wood's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Wood of Richmond, and his widow Marie Scott. Their contributions constitute the largest single gift for a single garden in arboretum history.

Two footbridges provide access to the 2½ acre garden, which features 84 different species of shrubs and wildflowers totaling more than 1,000 individual specimens.

"The completion of the Wood garden marks a sort of acceleration point for the arboretum," says the facility's director, Dr. Norlyn Bodkin. "And it's fitting that the garden dedication coincides with our 10th anniversary."

The arboretum's gardens have increased steadily, academic and community programming have tripled and grown more diverse, the visitor mark has passed into the thousands per year and hundreds of guided tours tromp through each year.

Programming includes natural history and garden trips and tours, outdoor theatrical performances, plant and bulb sales, historical celebrations, plans for children's day camps, special senior citizens activities and more.

"The JMU Arboretum is growing faster than the Lewis Ginter Botanical Garden [in Richmond]," says Andre Viette.

"And on a much smaller budget," Bodkin adds.

Viette is a member of the JMU Arboretum Advisory Council, world renowned daylily hybridizer and owner of Andre Viette Farm and Nursery.

INTERNATIONAL JAZZ

MATCHING GIFTS

DOUBLE THE VALUE

During fiscal year 1994-95, matching gift companies contributed $97,512 to JMU. The companies matched the university gifts made by their employees who are JMU alumni, parents and friends.

"A $25 gift by an alumnus to JMU became a $50 gift because his employer matched it. A $50 gift became a $100 gift, and so on," explains Sven VanBaars, director of annual giving. "In effect, the value of their gifts doubled."

There are many companies who practice matching gifts. Your employer may be one. Contact your company's personnel department or call JMU's development office at (540) JMU-3863 to find out whether your company is a matching gift company. If so, fill out your company's matching gift form and send it along with your next gift to JMU. You'll have doubled the value.

Harrisonburg Mayor John Neff's signature proclaims JMU Jazz Day in Harrisonburg; U.S. Congressmen Frank Wolfe and Tom Davis, U.S. Senator John Warner and Virginia Governor George Allen express their congratulations; and the Presidential seal and signature of Bill Clinton bracket White House "Best Wishes."

A big blue scrapbook filled with these citations, snapshots, posters and programs barely contain all the hoopla and enthusiasm surrounding nine days in July when the JMU Jazz Ensemble showcased its talents at two of Europe's most prestigious jazz festivals – Montreux in Switzerland, and North Sea in The Netherlands.

Financing the trip took a little improvisation. But thanks to the families and friends of ensemble members, the Harrisonburg community, a number of well-received gigs in Harrisonburg and Washington, D.C., plus a helping hand from the JMU Foundation and the university, the 18-member group and its director, Gunnar Mossblad were bound for Europe.

"We were a hit over there," Mossblad says. So much so that the usually time-conscious Montreux officials once permitted the Ensemble to play over its allotted time. "The crowd just wouldn't let us get off the stage," Mossblad says.

In all, the group performed 10 times in nine days, including one show less than five hours after they checked into their hotel at North Sea.

And what about nerves and jitters from the mostly young musicians playing in such a select professional spotlight? According to Mossblad, "I tell my students what my father told me: 'It's what you love to do, just enjoy it. Professional secretaries don't get nervous when they have an important letter to type.' And the kids were fine."

Another important play date looms on the horizon. Early in September the Jazz Chamber Ensemble received an invitation to perform in Atlanta before the International Association of Jazz Educators – still another venue for the JMU jazz program to highlight its national and international reputation.
